WHY LATIN AMERICA?

MOVING FORWARD

Bustling economic activity is driven by a generation with increasing purchasing power.

POTENTIAL TO CREATE VALUE

An abundance of natural resources, cutting-edge manufacturing and global know-how have the potential to fuel opportunities for economic growth.

GROWING

Tourism, exports, currency may benefit exports. Upcoming programs and events may drive expansion.

Diverse region with tremendous potential to create value

Abundance of natural resources:

- CHILE — world's biggest copper producer.
- PERU — world's largest silver producer; also copper, gold and zinc.
- BOLIVIA — abundant deposits of lithium and iron ore; second largest natural gas field in South America.
- MEXICO — significant exporter of oil, silver, and steel.

Leading producers and exporters of food and agricultural products:

- COLOMBIA — one of most important exporters of coffee in the world.
- BRAZIL — significant exporter of sugarcane-based ethanol, raw cane and refined sugar, beef, soybeans, coffee, citrus juice and cellulose.
- ARGENTINA — world's leading exporter of soybean products.
- PERU — international leader in seafood.

Significant positive social and economic changes

Government focus in much of the region on reform and stabilization:

- Chile funded the world's most impressive counter-cyclical economic relief program to aid COVID lockdowns.
- First World-style vaccination program far ahead of any other country in the region.
- Rising prices and demand for copper and food products has the potential to bring billions in foreign currency into Chile strengthening the Peso.
- Brazil continues to steer a net positive and sensible economic path
- GDP growth steadily rose driven by progressive increase in household consumption and investment.
- Deeper integration into the global economy and rising domestic competition are boosting productivity.
- Peru economy grew by 13.3% in 2021 helped by macroeconomic stability by the new administration.
- Economy rebounding after sharp contraction 2020.

Demonstrated growth

- The worst may be behind us. GDP across the Latin American region grew more than expected in 2020, averaging 6.2%. Upward trajectory of commodity prices has potential to benefit LATAM this year.
- Global trade, commodity prices and financial conditions may provide tailwinds for the region's recovery.

WHY LATIN AMERICA?

Never let a good crisis go to waste – Winston Churchill

We believe Latin America is a region poised for significant growth and participation in the global economy. Latin America was hard hit by Covid-19. The 7.4% loss in GDP was the largest in any region in 2020. LATAM governments are taking action to ensure fiscal, monetary and financial sustainability with urgent reforms to improve fiscal outcomes and to foster growth. These measures aim to boost productivity.

Managed Debt/GDP¹

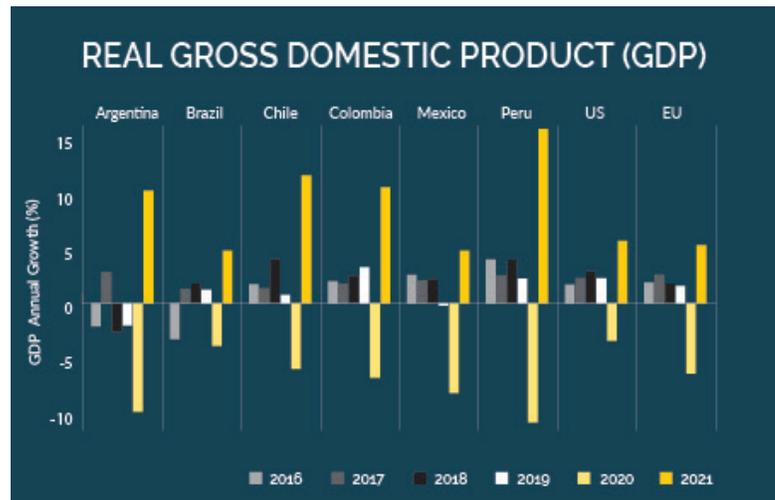

Latin American countries have significantly lower Debt/GDP ratios than the United States and Eurozone, demonstrating their ability to meet current and future obligations.
